The Charges Against the Labor Commissioner of Destroying Public Records.

Labor Commissioner Charles F. Peck of New York and his stenographer, Elbert Rodgers, were successful for a second time yesterday in another proceeding brought against them for destroying public records, in the shape of tariff circulars on which the commissioner based his report, which was given to the public several weeks before the election. In the court of sessions at Albany yesterday Judge Clute sustained the demurrer to the indictment found against Peck and Rodgers and discharged both gentlemen.

The opinion written by Judge Clute exhaustively reviews the law under which Mr. Peck was appointed and the indictment was found and concludes: "The act or law that creates or makes the office and officer known as the commissioner of statistics of labor does not provide a place that he shall call his office or bureau of labor statistics. Neither does it require the commissioner to been all officer known as the commissioner of statistics. Neither does it require the commissioner to bureau of labor statistics. Neither does it require the commissioner to been an officer known as the commissioner to bureau of labor statistics. Neither does it require the commissioner to keep a file or record WALTER B.
